"For environmental and economic reasons, the towns cannot handle this on their own," he said. "The state has a major role to play, and the county as well.

"We have to get a handle on this at the regional level," he told the county officials, "and I can't think of a better way to do that than through the counties. I ask all of you to be willing to work with us."

The governor's office has yet to provide specific details on what he promises will be "an integrated solid waste proposal," but he did tell the officials that it would include programs, incentives and, where necessary, disincentives. Front-end waste reduction will be an important element of the plan, he said. "We need the same vision as when we

At a panel discussion the following day. Sam Zaitlin, of Saco, a private recycler and former chairman of the Board of Environmental Protection, said the "municipal solid waste situation is on the verge of collapse."

Board sticks with early out plan; adds child care

Following more than two hours of discussion Monday evening, the SAD #44 Board of Directors approved, on a trial basis, an administration plan for providing child care options for elementary students released early from school on Vednesday afternoons.

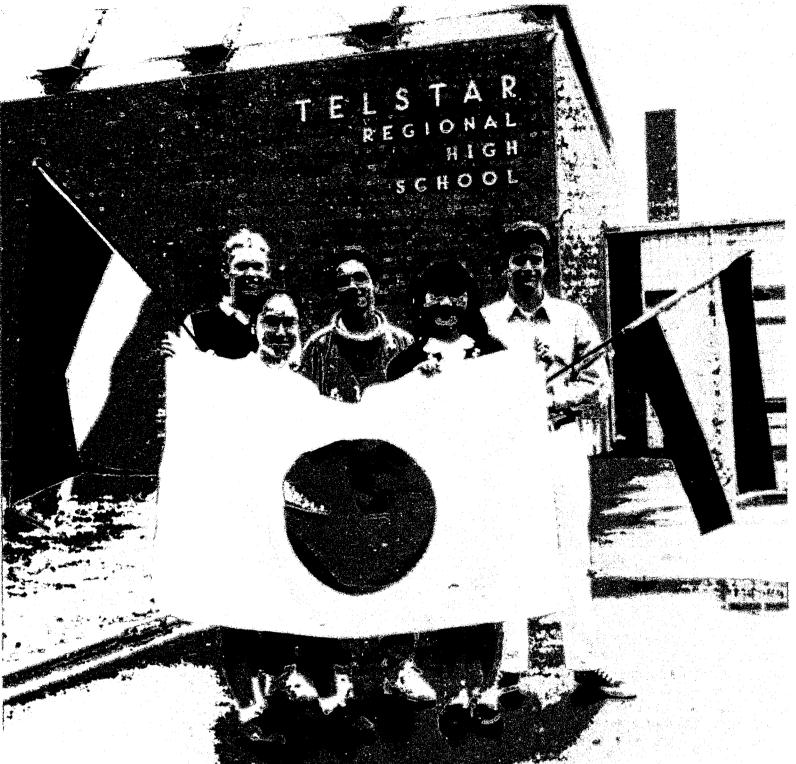

The 10-4 vote in effect re-affirmed the board's vote last spring to allow elementary school teachers to use Wednesday afternoons for professional development activities. The plan takes effect next week and will be subject to board review

Prior to the vote, nine parents spoke against the early release plan, and Board Chairman Merton Brown read a critical letter from three others.

All of the speakers were sympathetic with the teachers' need for professional development time, but they argued that the time should not come from the children's classroom time. They also agreed, as did many board members. that the plan had been badly_communicated to the parents.

"It was very presumptuous of us to assume that parents who might have

Foreign students enjoy life in Maine

For the five foreign students living with host families in the Bethel area this year, one of the things that impresses them most is the price of goods, which they consider cheap.

Lobster, for example, carries a prohibitive price tag in Japan, according to Satoko Funazaki and Mariko Kamijo, both 17. At $80 per lobster, the two had never tried it before coming here.

Gregor Axler, of Germany, had also lived 18 years without getting within eating distance of a lobster. However, with host parents Robert and Margaret Hand, of Bryant Pond, he had a chance to sample one. "It was the first time in my life," he recalled. "I really enjoyed Spanish exchange students Jordi Felio de la Pena and Carlos Aizpun, both 18, noticed the price tags on Levis when they went shopping with host families Tom and Melinda Remington, of Bethel, and Ray and Janice Harrington, of Greenwood, respectively. In Spain, a pair of jeans would cost $80, they said. Here, for $90, Carlos purchased two pairs of Levis and still had money left for two shirts. Both the German student and the Overnight, the sheets filled up, front and back, with signatures and more complaints about the service provided by the Bryant Pond Telephone Company.

Mrs. Barton's petition cites the difficulty in dialing long distance ("and when you're on this system, everything is long distance," she said); the problems for businesses that must use the system; and the unreliability of the service in

A note from the publisher

Chinese historians, both ancient and modern, were expected to assign praise and blame in the writing of history. A dynasty always began according to Chinese historians-because of the great virtue of the founder, and it always decayed because of the moral infirmities of the latter-day rulers.

Western historians, especially modern scholars, are less likely to mold historical facts to suit didactic purposes. And newspapers, which are the repositories of many of the facts from which more detailed histories are written, are usually even more cautious to keep news stories free of bias.

But, unlike history books, newspapers are expected to present biased, lively, thought-provoking views on the editorial page. While many of these viewswhether from editorial writers, columnists or letter-writers—are complaints and advice, there is also the occasionalexpressed opinion that a government body, or a business, or a group of citizens has done a commendable job. Thus do we journalists hark back to the practice of the Chinese historians in making of our journals—or, at least our editorial pages—an effort to assign praise and blame. Last week I was remiss in not including a place in the response coupon for comments of praise. (I was also remiss innot putting the coupon where it could be easily clipped out. Above you will find the revised response coupon, and I hope you will take the time to fill it out and send it to The Citizen, P.O. Box 109, Bethel 04217. Or simply bring it by the office. I'll report later on the responses.

Well who won, who lost? No, I'm not talking about the Olympics-though more about that later. Rather, I'm thinking back to Monday night's great debate between the Democratic and Republican hopefuls for the office of President of the United States of America. "Great debate" is maybe overstating the case. Nothing earthshaking, or even very new, was said; certainly nothing very memorable. Unless, of course, you consider the phrase "a thousand points of light"—a phrase made up by a wellpaid speechwriter, which George Bush keeps repeating as if it's a mantra, or probably worse yet—as if it has some real meaning. All the instant experts following the debate were debating the question: "Who won?" Their conclusion: neither candidate won. I think that was the wrong question to worry about. Remember the Nixon-Kennedy debate? Remember that people who listened to the debate on radio thought Nixon won. People who watched the debate on TV thought Kennedy

Since the TV audience is by far the more important audience nowadays, I think the post-debate question should have been: who lost? I think Michael Dukakis, whose team did not prepare their candidate to look good on the tube, lost. Although his arguments were well expressed, his image was that of a busboy rather than a national leader. Buttoned up in his tight collar and tight Ivy League suit with no shoulders, using the same two or three tight hand gestures in front of the microphone, Dukakis came across as a mind with no body, with no heart.

Bush, on the other hand, for all his bumbling and rambling and halfsheepish smiles, came across as very human. I found myself empathyzing with him, because certainly, if I had to get up in front of a group of people and think fast, I'd be the same way. Whether one likes Bush's positions on how to deal with terrorists, or how to coddle dictatorial allies, or how to treat women who choose to have abortions, or how to select a vice-president, or how to divide the nation's limited assets between guns and butter is another question.

The question TV images settle is simple: who do you feel better being around? Dukakis lost.

I remember one thing Bush has often said, though he didn't mention it in the debate. He has said he would never apologize for America. Whether we shoot down a civilian airliner, support outrageous dictators, allow the free importation of drugs into the country or pollute the air and oceans of the planet

Earth, Bush would not apologize. I'm not that chauvinistic. I think there are incidents and circumstances that demand nothing less than an apology. It's not a matter of being less of a-patriot; it's a matter of being more of a fellow

At the Olympic games in Seoul, certainly the head of the U.S. delegation should have apologized to the other Olympic teams for the sorry spectacle the U.S. team put on during the opening ceremonies. The U.S. delegation—acting like pre-adolescents in sad need of chaperones, straggled out of the line of march, causing confusion for following delegations, and basically destroying the well-ordered ceremony. While many of the U.S. teams and individual athletes have shown they know how to behave, as well as knowing how to perform, a number have shown mostly that they have never learned discipline while learning their sport. And, of course, without discipline, you can't really learn your sport. A boxer not getting to his match on time and then blaming his lateness on a crowded bus; the gold medal men's medley swim team giggling all through the Star Spangled Banner; the two swimmers caught vandalizing a night clubthe images of the U.S. team's immaturity are too common. More importantly, in the long run, is that the American behavior is unleashing pent-up feelings of anti-Americanism among the host Koreans.

I would not only apologize, but I would make sure that when we send delegations abroad, whether they be Olympic teams or military units, they have been trained to act like grown-ups. And if they can't be so trained, then they must be more closely chaperoned.

Forests face many threats besides fire

From the American Forest Council, 415 River Street, Troy, N.Y., 12180. The wildfires in Yellowstone National Park and other western states have brought to national attention the impact nature can have on our forest. It has also ignited controversy over how to manage our national parks and wilderness lands. The current "let it burn" policy that has been in effect since 1972 is under scrutiny as a result of this year's devastating fire

In the northeastern states where forest fire is not as threatening, other acts of nature are. According to Jane Diffey, American Forest Council's northeastern regional manager, "In the moist climate of the northeast, wildfires rarely reach the massive proportions of this year's western conflagrations. But winds, insects and disease all threaten our eastern forests. Forest management is one of the best ways to minimize the damage to these natural resources.'

In Yellowstone, before the fires ever burned, over half of the trees were already dead or dying. The Mountain Pine beetle, one of the most destructive pests in western forests, had already hit the trees long before the fires ever did. The fires, fueled by the trees that had succumbed to the Pine beetle burned hotter and faster than normal. Had these trees been harvested, less fuel would have fed the fire.

No one advocates logging in the Park. but what has happened there demonstrates what the lack of forest management can do to other forests. The same management principles that are applied in backyard gardening are applied in forest management. The unwanted, unproductive, diseased and insect infested plants are weeded out allowing for greater development of the healthier plants. A garden left unattentled will provide little, if any, benefit in the end. The same is true in the forest where it may take 40 to 100 years for trees to reach harvestable size.

Forest managers strive to control natural disturbances to produce the reatest forest benefit to humansrecreation, water, wildlife, wood and paper products-while maintaining the vital balance of the environment we call

This is in response to last week's article about getting football back at Telstar. Bill Roberts and the rest of the backers need to take a hard look at a couple of facts presented. Although 93 students expressed interest in playing, Mr. Higgins estimated that [only] one-half would stick to the commitment. That, in today's age, seems to be a generous figure. One only has to go back to an article fon Leavitt High School's football program this past week in the Lewiston Daily Sun. It mentioned that football programs are on the [decline] throughout the state because the kids seem more interested in earning money to pay for cars than playing a sport. (Wanting to work is not a quality you can fault in anyone.) Another important fact to consider is fan support. If football did come back; the initial year may indeed be promising. but what happens when they lose games by 40 points? How many people will continue to show up? You only have to go back to Telstar basketball to see what I I hope that the people of Newry enjoy mean. Five years ago we made the the growth they are going to receive. You playoffs, and home games were filled because everyone wanted to be operating manual. Two fire ponds will be - just wonder about the other 64 people that associated with a winner. After the next year, when they again struggled, the echoes in the [mostly empty] gym were

There also is the question of where the home games would be played. Would they be played away? Don't get me wrong. I was very much a football fan when it was played at Telstar. [But] it seems that there were too many "maybe's," "what-if's" and questioned commitments.

A final question I would like to ask is how many of the football backers have ever been to a soccer game and seen what that would be taking away from? Bobby Myers

·Echoing other speakers, Gail Russell said, "As a nurse, I do my professional development when I'm not working—on weekends and days off. I cannot agree with taking that time away from students, anymore than I'd take it away from my patients."

Jane Rolfe, of Bethel, agreed: "I'm all for professional development, but I don't get time to take off during my job to shut my door, take the phone off the the hook and say, 'Sorry, I can't see you today.'" Three SAD *44 teachers spoke in defense of the plan. Elizabeth O'Meara, lead teacher at Crescent Park School, pointed out that "professional development" did not really describe how the time would be spent. Most of the time, she said, would be devoted to communication among the teachers, curriculum coordination and recertification and evaluation activities that the state has mandated but has provided neither time nor money for.

."Nurses can talk to other nurses in the coffee room," she said, "but teachers hardly have the time to do that. Parent concern over child care had occasioned the board's reconsideration of the early release program, but the issue was mentioned only in passing by the parents at Monday evening's meeting. The district's three elementary school principals outlined the plan proposed by the administration for taking care of children who had no alternative care on Wednesday afternoon. The plan, which involves sites in each community and supervision by substitute teachers, is designed to accommodate up to 150 children, roughly 25 percent of the pupils to be released early. Some of the parents present objected to the fact that places in the child care program are on a first-come, first-served basis, but Woodstock School Principal David Murphy noted that at this point the to be discussed." administration has no idea how many children might apply for the program. If more places are needed, he said, the administration would try to find a way to accommodate them. Superintendent Dewaine Craig cautioned, however, that it might not be possible to find the money to cover the the cost of a much larger child care program. The present program is expected to cost the district approximately $13,000, he said, about half of which would be offset by parent contributions

The board eventually voted to approve the child care program, but a number of directors acknowledged that they realized there were strong feelings in the audience and in the community against the early release policy.

"I'm a skeptic regarding teacher workshops," said Director Stan Howe, of Russell as assistant softball Bethel, "but I voted for this as an Steve Keane as junior class

To the Editor: It is time that the published hearsay, accusations, rumors, and speculation regarding Gordon Tire be replaced with some factual information. First of all, I am not applying for a permit to establish a "tire dump." I am currently preparing to apply to the Department of En-license to operate a "tire storage facility." At the proposed site, tires will be received, sorted, stored and shipped, according to their end use. No tires will be disposed of on this site. It is true that there was a statewide moratorium prohibiting the establishment of any new tire storage or tire disposal facilites. This moratorium allowed the DEP some time to enact into law comprehensive regulations governing tire storage and tire disposal facilities. I might add that the South

Paris fire chief (John Bryant) worked closely with the DEP in formulating the Currently, there are many "outlaw" tire dumps in Maine. The larger ones (over one million tires) are located in Bowdoinham, Durham, and Hampden. The smaller ones are scattered throughout the state. The Bethel area has its share of smaller ones. There is one on the Jordan property in Bethel on Grover Hill road. The so-called "stump dump" in Greenwood has more scrap tires than stumps, in close proximity to an untended open fire—and no hint of a fire pond. The Bethel landfill has a scrap tire pile that doesn't meet DEP requirements (no water supply and no fire lanes). There is also a pile of scrap tires hidden in the woods in South Bethel, located on a fresh water aquifer recharge

I seem to be the only person in the state

The DEP requires that an escrow account be established or a bond be posted to cover the cost of cleanup or final closure. In addition, a financial statement must be submitted to demonstrate the fiscal responsibility of the applicant. Joint meetings have been held with the fire departments of Greenwood and Bethel. I intend to incorporate all of their recommendations into my site plan and have succeeded in driving me away. I

Oxford Hills' growth attracts shoppers, but poses problems

The rapid expansion of the Oxford Hills economy, especially the service sector, is attracting more and more customers from Bethel and other SAD #44 area towns to do their shopping there. This is according to a report prepared by the Androscoggin Valley Council of Governments for the Oxford Hills Long Range Planning Steering Committee.

The retail sector has expanded so strongly, the report notes, that the traffic flow on Main Street in South Paris is now equal to that on Lisbon Street in

The report found the Oxford Hills business community (Norway, Paris, West Paris, Oxford, Waterford, Otisfield and Harrison) to be strong, diversified and optimistic about the future. Nearly all the businesspeople interviewed for the study expected to see expanded sales and employment over the next three years.

The major perceived-restriction on further growth, the report found, was a shortage of skilled labor and professional/technical employees. The available labor force is still larger than by Pike the number of jobs in the area, but the area labor market participation rate is low and the rate of job growth is currently running twice that of labor force

For retail and other service businesses, space for expansion is also hard to come by.

I have 13 months left in the Army and I will return to Maine. I had always planned to settle in Newry, but reading of the events that are soon to happen. I have decided against this. I have read of a proposed moratcrium that would give the people some time to step back and look at the situation more closely. I really thought that was a good idea; and then I read that the people of Newry rejected it! I propose a permanent moratorium. I may not understand all the issues, but in my opinion the people of Newry made a very big mistake by defeating the moratorium. Newry has many natural resources and beautiful countryside. I may be selfish, but I am against growth in Newry, at least on the Bear River side. I don't want Newry or the Bethel area to become a North Conway situation. While I was growing up I may have complained about what a small town Newry is, but

I wouldn't have it any other way! I hope that the people of Newry enjoy the growth they are going to receive. You have succeeded in driving me away. I just wonder about the other 64 people that

Forests face many threats besides fire

From the American Forest Council 415 River Street, Troy, N.Y., 12180. The wildfires in Yellowstone National Park and other western states have brought to national attention the impact nature can have on our forest. It has also ignited controversy over how to manage our national parks and wilderness lands. The current "let it burn" policy that has been in effect since 1972 is under scrutiny as a result of this year's devastating fire

In the northeastern states where forest fire is not as threatening, other acts of nature are. According to Jane Diffey, American Forest Council's northeastern regional manager, "In the moist climate of the northeast, wildfires rarely reach the massive proportions of this year's western conflagrations. But winds, insects and disease all threaten our eastern forests. Forest management is one of the best ways to minimize the damage to these natural resources." In Yellowstone, before the fires ever burned, over half of the trees were already dead or dying. The Mountain Pine beetle, one of the most destructive pests in western forests, had already hit the trees long before the fires ever did. The fires, fueled by the trees that had succumbed to the Pine beetle burned hotter and faster than normal. Had these trees been harvested, less fuel would have fed the fire

No one advocates logging in the Park. but what has happened there demonstrates what the lack of forest management can do to other forests. The same management principles that are applied in backyard gardening are applied in forest management. The unwanted, unproductive, diseased and insect infested plants are weeded out allowing for greater development of the healthier plants. A garden left unattended will provide little, if any, benefit in the end. The same is true in the forest where it may take 40 to 100 years for trees to reach harvestable size.

The amount of potential timber lost to such destructive forces as wind, fire, insects and disease is large. We can not eradicate these natural disturbances entirely, but with proper management of forests these losses can be greatly reduced.

Forest managers strive to control natural disturbances to produce the greatest forest benefit to humansrecreation, water, wildlife, wood and paper products—while maintaining the vital balance of the environment we call

Parent concern over child care had occasioned the board's reconsideration of the early release program, but the issue was mentioned only in passing by the parents at Monday evening's meeting. The district's three elementary school principals outlined the plan proposed by the administration for taking care of children who had no alternative care on Wednesday afternoon. The plan, which involves sites in each community and supervision by substitute teachers, is designed to accommodate up to 150 children, roughly 25 percent of the pupils to be released early. Some of the parents present objected to the fact that places in the child care program are on a first-come, first-served basis, but Woodstock School Principal David Murphy noted that at this point the administration has no idea how many children might apply for the program. If more places are needed, he said, the administration would try to find a way to accommodate them.

Superintendent Dewaine Craig cautioned, however, that it might not be possible to find the money to cover the the cost of a much larger child care program. The present program is expected to cost the district approximately $13,000, he said, about half of which would be offset by parent contributions.

The board eventually voted to approve the child care program, but a number of directors acknowledged that they realized there were strong feelings in the audience and in the community against the early release policy.

"I'm a skeptic regarding teacher workshops," said Director Stan Howe, of Bethel, "but I voted for this as an experiment. Sometimes you have to do what you think is right." he said. "It may not be popular; it may not work. But it might end up being beneficial for the kids." Citing the concerns of the parents in the audience. Director John Foster, of 'Andover, said: "I'm not against the program, but I feel I should represent the feelings of the people. If I say [to them] "I don't care what you think." I'm certainly never going to get their cooperation—Newry, and Richard Crandall, of Bethel, Mr. Foster, however, joined Dr. Howe meeting.

Home weatherization course offered through Adult Education

The SAD #44 Adult Education program, in cooperation with the Maine Officer of Energy Resources, will run a six. hour Home Weatherization workshop program. The statewide Weatherize Homes in Maine (WHIME) program will be run at Telstar High School on Oct. 4 and 11 from 6:30-9:30. After completion of the six hour training course, the Office of Energy Resources will award a $75 materials youcher to each participating household. According to Harvey DeVane, Director of the Office of Energy Resources, the program has been conducted in more than 35 communities across the state and has served over 1,500 Maine residents in the last four months. "Participants have used the vouchers to purchase weatherization materials at local building supply and hardware stores," said DeVane. "By using information gained at the workshop sessions and apget time to take off during my job to shut plying materials supplied by the voucher, participants should see measurable change in the winter comfort of their homes.

Nearly 50 adult education programs participated in the delivery of WHIME programs from January through May of 1988 and another round of programs will be run in the fall. "Adult education programs have proven to be an excellent vehicle for the delivery of the programs, DeVane said. "These educators are in touch with their communities, know how to get information out to people in their towns and do a fine job presenting this program."

According to Cathy Newell the SAD #44 Adult Education will offer the program to up to 100 participants. The course will be taught by Tim O'Connor who has extensive experience in the home construction and weatherization field. Because of the limited number of slots available, preregistration is required. The SAD #44 Adult Education office can be reached by calling 824-2780.

"The situation has been going on and getting worse," she said, "and we don't want ber abused any more."

Ms. Zytkewicz said she was dissatisfied by the actions taken to correct the situation, and with the administration's response to her concerns. Superintendent Craig said: "I do believe your child is in a safe educational environment at that school."

Despite the administration's assurances, Chairman Brown said: "This is obviously something that needs to be discussed. The board voted to take the matter up in executive session at its next meeting. The board also voted to postpone indefinitely a discussion requested by Gail Sysko, of Newry, of the district's assessment formula. Superintendent Craig said Mrs. Sysko, (who could not attend Monday's meeting) had told him she didn't feel there was sufficient support on the board or among the selectmen in SAD #44 towns to pursue changes in the assessment formula at this time. In personnel matters, the board voted to approve the following extra-curricular appointments. At the high school: Elizabeth LaVallee and Thomas Remington as alpine ski co-coaches, Timothy Kersey as boys' track coach, Judith Kersey as girls' track coach, James Lunney as head softball coach, Barbara Russell as assistant softball coach, and Steve Keane as junior class advisor.

At the middle school: Timothy Brooks as assistant girls' basketball coach, James Fiske as assistant boys' basketball coach, and Daniel Hannon as softball coach. In addition, June Inman and Melinda Remington were approved as substitute personnel, and Ruth Sallade as part-time middle school Chapter I teacher.

It was very similar to what American students have. All the students said they were ahead and then turned it over to Linda. They ex-

f their American counterparts in advanced math, since they all had to take three years of algebra, whether or not they intend to go to college.

The students noted the difference in class sizes at Telstar and at their home schools. In Spain, the norm is 35-45 students per class, said Jordi and Carlos; 40-50 in Japan, said Mariko and Satoko. In Germany, said Gregor, there were 25-30 students in the lower grades of high school, but for the better students who stayed for the advanced grades, class size dropped to 10-15.

School discipline was a matter that all the foreign students said was different here and abroad. "The rules are quite strict here," according to Carlos and Jordi. In their Barcelona schools, students could have beer or wine with lunch if they so desired. In Germany, said Gregor, students are assumed to be responsible individuals and are allowed to do what they want without a lot of rules. All the students were amazed that they are ony given three minutes to change classes t Telstar.

Only the Japanese students thought Telstar had easier discipline than their home schools, where they have to wear uniforms each day.

Spanish student Jordi said, "The teacher here is like a friend. In Spain he's very distant." And all the students seemed to like this aspect of the American system. They also liked the idea that American students could pick and choose among courses, instead of everyone taking the same courses.

Five teams were active during the 1987-88 school year; four of them took part in a regional meet, and two "placed" at the meet. Because of last year's high level of enthusiasm, it is likely that a great many students will wish to take part in this year's program. In order to offer the OM experience to as many children as possible, a full coaching staff is needed. Each pair of coaches works with a team of five to seven young people. The job of a coach is not to solve the problem, but simply to enable the team members to work together cooperatively as they find their own solution.

Teams typically meet once a week for one to two hours between November and March. The coaching experience is a rewarding one, as the coach sees first hand the enthusiasm and creativity of our community's young people. An initial coaches' meeting will be held Tuesday, Oct. 4, at 7 p.m. at the home of Jean Bass (the Congregational Parsonage on Board Street). New coaches are needed and welcome. Those who would like to explore the possibility of coaching an OM team are urged to attend. If you are interested, but cannot be at the meeting, please call Jean Bass, 824-2653, or Nancy Grover, 836-3533.

Newry Selectman Steve Wight sees the solid waste issue as an excellent opportunity for county government to assert itself. "If county government really wanted to have impact, this would be an excellent area to start with." he said. "I've always said that with solid waste.

regional is the only way to go.' Mr. Wight noted that Newry is currently exploring the possibility of a cooperative solid waste arrangement with Norway/South Paris or with Mexico when the Bethel landfill is no longer available to the town. The Bethel selectmen have notified Newry, Hanover, and Oxford County (for Albany and Mason townships) that—beginning next July the Bethel landfill may turn away the above towns.

Bethel Selectman Arthur Gilbert said that while Bethel has decided to go it alone in managing its solid waste disposal, the selectmen would still be interested in hearing the details of the governor's plan. "If they had something we were interested in, they might convince us to change our minds," he said. County Commissioner Norman Ferguson Jr. has been a proponent of using county governments as the leaders in regionalization of solid waste disposal. He said, after listening to the governor. that he was pleased with the proposal and felt sure the governor would present a package of economic incentives to get the proposal moving.

Dear Tom, We were quite impressed with your installation ceremony on last Saturday as commander of American Legion Post #156. Waltham, Mass. It was a pleasure to be there with the rest of the family and to hear you make a public affirmation of a renewed sense of patriotism. That seems to be spreading throughout the Weren't you surprised to learn that my new home town is well known to a number of your associates? After you introduced me as your sister from "a far away village called West Bethel, somewhere in Maine," I talked with at least a half dozen guests who have some kind of Bethel connection! As a result, I bring back greetings to Jeri Brooks from Past National Commander, John T. Jake Comer. It seems that Jake and his entourage came to Bethel last year for Jeri's homecoming as National Vice President, Eastern Division of the Legion Auxiliary. And to Town Clerk, Merton Brown, I bring a "hello" from my high school classmate and Waltham City Clerk, Peter Koutoujian. Pete tells me that he and Merton have met at many a city/town) clerks' convention. So, how's that for the "small world" department? Now, if you want proof that patriotism is alive and well and living in Maine, get this. Our friend and neighbor, Rupert Grover, has just finished two 25 foot flagpoles of homegrown fir as birthday gifts to his sister. Verna Thayer, of Mason, and his son, Rupert Jr., of Norway, (Maine, that is). Verna, brother Richard Grover and nephew Dan Grover watched with pride as the colors were hoisted for the first time. Her husband, Dewey, recorded the ceremony for posterity. Meanwhile, in Norway, Rupert Jr. has set his mast in place, sans flag. That minor detail is being ironed out, even as we speak. Caution: Should there be a yard sale in Mason offering an "incomplete" croquet set, look to the top of

Verna's flagpole for a clue! While we were in Massachusetts for your installation, Tom, the West Bethel Union Church ran yet another successful public supper. Nancy Grover, president of the Ladies Chapel Aid, reports that a crowd of about 85 to 90 enjoyed the good home cooking and left smiling and satiated. You'll have to try to schedule a visit around a West Bethel public supper, church or grange, for a real Yankee culinary experience! The local grange will be doing a corned beef dinner on Oct

Your correspondent spent last week Kept. 9 and 101 at Nashua, N.H. at the semblies of God Women's Retreat. here were 670 women there from the orthern New England District (Maine. iew Hamsphire and Vermont). We Marilyn Van Horn. Dot Chopping and I eit early Friday morning, stopped in orham to have breakfast and still made Vashua in about four hours. We stayed it the Sheraton Lera which looks like an numense castle. Probably more seasond travelers than I are not surprised to e met by pages dressed in red medieval ostumes complete with breeches, black use and white neck ruffles, but it was mething out of my sphere of exerience. We had Betty Maltz for a neaker and following the afternoon sesion I got a chance to visit m; cousin. arol Flint Hatch, and her 16 year old on. Michael, who live in nearby Hollis, V.H., for about an hour before the banruet. Then it was back to another session refere returning. In the morning we were erved a lunch and then the last session asted until about noon. It may be called a retreat but it is hardly the kind one picures where one goes to get rested. It is more like a seminar. We took it easy on the way home because we were all tired and had to take turns driving but we got to Locke Mills safely at 5:30 p.m. Saturlay wendering where all the time went to that seemed to foom so long on Friday

Maine weather goes from hot to cold and back again but often the gardens get the worst of it this time of year. So we have a lot of green tomatoes picked before the last frost. I hate to waste food, so if any of you out there would like some for pickles or your other favorite green temato recipes, they are free for the asking. They have ripened off very well for us given time, too, so maybe if you have room and would like some ripe ones you could try ripening some. We don't have the room to keep them and I've already put up quarts of relish. Give me a call if you'd like some.

Our sincerest sympathy goes to the families of Raymond Mills and Patricia Astbury. Raymond was the brother of Lee Mills and Patricia the sister of Margaret Mills. Blaine Mills was a bearer at both services: Patricia's on Monday in Gardiner and Raymond's on Tuesday in Bethel. It has been a difficult time for the Mills' family. Lee Mills' brother, Clayton, is in the hospital convalenseing from an operation and Mary Mills' sister, Vi Churchill, is in Central Maine Medical Center for treatment and therapy. One bright spot is that grandson, Dustin, celebrated his 11th birthday

Lorraine Mills and Lillian Herrick visited Thelma Merrill, Monday evening at Ledgeview Memorial Home and then attended a dispatchers' meeting at the Tri-Town Ambulance Barn.

Charlotte Cole and Helen Chase went to Ledgeview, Friday where Charlotte played harmonia and guitar. Then they went to Dora and Elmer Dingley's where they had supper and then played cards.

John and Lorraine Mills were among those attending Raymond Mills' funeral in Bethel, Tuesday. Then they went to Ledgeview where John visited with Joe Roderick and Lorraine with Thelma Vera Cross and Helen Chase were dinner guests of Charlotte Cole, Thursday. After dinner they went to Peggy Blake's on High Street in South Paris where they joined Viva Whitman, Russell Yates, Charlotte Sennett, of East Andover, Laura Hutchins, of East Andover, with her accordian, and Eva Sandborn, of Woodstock, N.H., with her fiddle, and they all had a hootenanny.

afternoon to see the chiropractor. As I was going down from Elm Hill road, I saw two ambulances in the road by Tucker Street and the driveway leading into Shop 'N Save, so went around to get to the doctor's office. Others came in who knew more about the accident which involved some school kids and another party. I don't know the details but guess they weren't seriously hurt or at least I hope not. A gentleman came in while I was waiting and said there was an accident at Market Square in South Paris and a lady out in the parking lot in back of the store next door had an asthma attack and fell and they thought had a broken ankle because of the fall. I thought that was enough to happen in a matter of an hour and a half. Hope all are doing okay. I didn't do too much on Saturday, but sew, read, knit, crochet and get house work done. That kept me busy most of the day. Peggy and Eva went to the dance in the evening. Some of Peggy's friends came down and went with them. Got things started for lunch on Sunday and then Michael came for me to go to Lewiston about 10:45. Russell and Peggy had to finish getting the lunch for them. I went down to stay over night and help teach crocheting the next day. Workshop for women

Workshop for women: "Choosing our preferred future" is the title of a weekend seminar sponsored by the SAD #44 Adult and Community Education program.

The seminar will be held on Friday, Oct. 7, and Saturday, Oct. 8, and will have Edith Seashore and Mary Lou Maisel as facilitators. In describing the seminar, the facilitators commented that, "In today's world, we as women have resources that are different and unique. This workshop is an opportunity to explore these resources and identify barriers that challenge us. We will look at ways to build the structures and agendas that will strengthen our families, our workplaces and our communities." Edith Seashore and Mary Lou Maisel are members of National Training Labs (NTL) who, in addition to serving as NTL faculty members, maintain their own consulting practices working with corporations and organizations. In 1985, they facilitiated a workshop for Bethel area women. Edith Seashore, based in Washington, D.C., is a former president looked down over the valley. The sky leaned down softly, the road curved, the water sparkled, the fences dipped into the hollows and were lost, the forest grew decorously, as if taught manners in youth. From this spot, whether shivering in bare winter bones or in summer clad in blossoms or in sprinkle of autumn leaves, as it was today, the land was beautiful. I like to watch as the seasons merge imperceptibly one into the other. I have seen this, when day slips gradual-Iv into night, sun and moon whirl through the sky and they seem on intimate terms with the earth in the valley below.

I remembered my days of raspberry or blackberry picking. The best berries, like the best of most things, grew hidden away out of sight. I had to bend double to find them, peering up through the forest of green canes, and pale green shoots and yellowing leaves to where they dangled, protected from wind and sun. They clung to filaments almost too fine to bear their weight. But what jewels they were, as they hung in clusters, purple in shade, or translucent crimson where a sunbeam hit them!

Whenever I stood up to rest my back and looked about. I saw sloping fields, the stand of spruce and fir in their many shades of green and beyond a glumpse of blue water and purple hills.

I have never regretted that I was born and grew up in a rural environment and married a farmer, even though farming has always been one of man's greatest gambles, for Mother Nature always heeds the marked cards. His mortal enemy, the weather was always unpredictable, but he could rely on order-Is march of the seasons. In spite of toil. sweat, uncertainty and frustration; I think no way of life yields more endurung satisfaction, over the years, than that of farming.

I have a beautiful pear tree on my lawn and this summer it was so loaded with fruit that it had to have four props to hold the limbs from breaking. Everyone who came and saw it would exclaim, "What a loaded pear tree you have." I thought many times of the different people with whom I'd share them. But—last Thursday morning when I looked out they had disappeared except for a pail full on the tallest limbs. Some of the props were down and some of the smaller branches were broken. Who, who was my night visitor I wondered. By all the evidence I decided it must have been a bear. If so, he or she or a family had a very full

We have now entered into our fall season and the news isn't too much as people are harvesting and buttoning up for the winter. As most places have gotten frosts, the vegetables have to be picked, sorted and either canned or stored for winter. We have had quite a few rainv days in between some "glad to be alive" days. The trees are coming out in their beautiful fall colors before they undress for the long winter. Now is the time also to start winterizing the house and bring out the winter clothing. During those long hot days this summer we were looking forward to the cooler weather, just like during those subfreezing days in the winter we are looking forward to spring. Anyone with memories, photographs and/or artifacts relating to Clark Street is urged to call Mrs. Brown, at 824-2080, or the Society office, at 824-2908.

Oct. 1-2 is Homecoming Weekend at the Dr. Moses Mason House Museum. Tours of the house will be conducted from 1 to 3 p.m. both afternoons. The house will be decorated with harvest items. Our annual open house was well attended this past Thursday. Mr. Koch welcomed everyone and then introduced Mr. Burke and his chorus, who presented two songs. Chorus members singing were: Tovah Everett, Faith Lovejoy, Amanda Herrick, Mandy Blake, Maris Herrick, Kim Kangas, Candace Campbell, Jeannine Dembski, Erin Doughty, Amy Hill, Carrie Hammond. Alicia Coolidge and Emily Cole. Mr. Kech then introduced staff members and talked briefly about our upcoming funfraiser to benefit our playground project. Farents and teachers then met in individual classrooms to discuss what is going on at each grade level. Refreshments were enjoyed in the library. Un Thursday, Sept. 29, the first official colunteer meeting will be held. This will he at 7 p.m. in the library and refreshrients will also be enjoyed. Mr. Mark Otterson, who is our district's volunteer coordinator, will be present to find out how our program works and to see if he an be of assistance to us. Mrs. Michelle Blake is our parent volunteer coordinator. Please call Mrs. Blake, or any of us at school, if you have any questions about our program. We are looking forward to meeting old and new faces Thursday night.

Classroom projects currently in progress are: the Kindergarten children are learning to clearly state their names, adtresses and phone numbers so they will be prepared in case of emergencies. The Ist-graders have been studying apples in several areas of the curriculum. They dissected an apple to learn about its parts. They tasted slices of apples with peanut butter and raisins. They have done apple tree art and science by creating an apple-shaped booklet depicting the apple tree as it looks at each season of the year. And, on Oct. 6 the Kindergarten and 1st Grade are going to visit Colonial Orchards to get a first-hand look at how apples grow, get picked and are packaged to sell. They will also get to see how cider is made. Did you know that Johnny Appieseed's birthday is Sept.

26° The 1st-graders know! The 2nd-graders have completed their neighborhood walks around West Paris and are now in the process of mapping what they saw. Eric Smith is the current student of the week. He will be featured in many of the 2nd-graders' activities all week long.

Grade 3 is featuring "Jack and the Beanstalk" this week. Beans have been planted. Will there be a giant too? The 4th-graders are trying to earn the right to have a pizza party. They have to master 100 addition facts in three minutes. They hope to accomplish this leat by late-October.

The 5th-graders, who were snapping photos during the first two weeks of school, created a bulletin board in time for open house. There were several candid shots on display in the downstairs

A reading assignment for one 6thgrade reading group extended into a science lesson for the whole class. Does clay float? How much water is displaced? Each student made a clay boat that could float.

Mrs. Verkouille's students released helium-filled balloons this week after reading and writing about hot air balloons. David Coy is writing great stories on the computer with Mrs. Gamble as part of his speech/language class. Sales are already in progress for our first major fundraiser for our playground project. The chocolate bars are delicious and the mugs make great gifts! DEFENSIVE DRIVING COURSE A defensive driving course is scheduled for Bethel in October. Classes will be held at Telstar High School on Monday and Wednesday evenings, Oct. 17, 19, 24, Instructor Eddy Naples said that those completing the course will receive a five point credit on their driving record, and they must register in advance at Bethel Adult Education. Further information is available by calling 824-2780. The defensive driving course covers accident-avoidance techniques which are essential for everyday driving situations.

The course includes films, classroom discussion and lectures. This course, which is open to the public, is sponsored by the Bethel Adult Education and the Maine Highway Safety Commission.

Alzheimer's disease and related lisorders, the living will and prepaid funerals will all be discussed on Oct. 11 at the Telstar Regional Adult Education

A provider from the Health Center will lead a discussion on the signs, symptoms and probable course of Alzheimer's disease as well as some supportive methods of treatment. The options of having a living will included in medical records will also be discussed.

A prepaid funeral will ease stress on a family in a time of great loss. Funeral directors are mandated by state law to have price lists discussed and contracts to be signed for services rendered. At the time of death of a family member it is most difficult to deal with these issues. A representative of an area funeral home will be present to discuss a prepayment

Although these subjects are difficult to discuss, we would all be doing our families a great service by attending this informational evening and giving some thought to whether we should maintain control over that part of life as well as

Wednesday. We are preparing stories, drawings and other pieces of work to show the parents. There is also a book fair open. The first project of the year has been assigned. It is a social studies project. We are supposed to do a map and have it relate to art. Well, that's all for this week. So long.

Two courses are on the fall schedule; including STEP (Systematic Training for Effective Parenting) and STEP-Teen, both are nationally known programs which have helped thousands of families. STEP will be offered on Thursday mornings from 9:15-11:15 at the Casco Bank meeting room on Main Street in Bethel, for eight weeks, starting Sept. 29. STEP-Teen will be held on Tuesday nights at Telstar from 7-9 starting on Sept. 27. The cost of the program is $15 per family which covers the cost of the book. Scholarships are available.

An emergency Board of Directors meeting was held last Thursday, Sept. 22. to discuss business held over from the Sept. 8 meeting.

A tentative budget for the Bethel Area Reservation Service was presented. Sylvia Clanton, of Bethel, has been hired. to be the full-time reservationist for BARS. Welcome, Sylvia. The chamber will be purchasing a computer to ease operations of BARS and to help with other chamber functions. The profits from the 1987-88 BARS activity is making this possible.

Discussion of a membership campaign brought about some ideas on how to approach prospective members. Related to this, a possible change of name for the chamber was discussed. If anyone has any good ideas on a new name that would still give us some geographical identify, let us know.

A progresss report on the Big E was given. Our attendance under the banner of "The Western Mountains and Lakes Region of Maine" has been very well received. We have disseminated a lot of written information and answered a lot of questions. Videos of the wood products industry, the Bethel Inn. both Sunday River and Mt. Abram skiways and the Oxford Hills have also been wellreceived. This project is being supported by the sale of the Maine Woodsman's Weatherstick. The SAD #44 Adult and Community Education program will again offer courses designed to assist parents in communicating with their children.

Two courses are on the fall schedule; including STEP (Systematic Training for Effective Parenting) and STEP-Teen. ave both are nationally known programs which have helped thousands of families. Lorrie Hoeh will be the facilitator for both programs. She used both programs during her years as a guidance counselor and taught both last year through SAD #44 Adult Education.

According to Cathy Newell, director of SAD #44 Adult and Community Education, participants in last year's sessions gave the program excellent reviews and ken reported learning concrete skills to enhance their family life. STEP will be offered on Thursday mornings from 9:15-11:15 at the Casco Bank meeting room on Main Street in Bethel. for eight weeks, starting Sept. 29. STEP-Teen will be held on Tuesday nights at Telstar from 7-9 starting on Sept. 27. Discussion of a membership campaign brought about some ideas on how to approach prospective members. Related to this, a possible change of name for the chamber was discussed. If anyone has any good ideas on a new name that would still give us some geographical identify, Abram skiways and the Oxford Hills have also been wellreceived. This project is being supported by the sale of the Maine Woodsman's Weatherstick. Many thanks to Rick and Ellen Whitney, of Maine Line Products, and Steve Wight, of the Sunday River Inn—our suppliers.

at Andover Elementary School. The Kindergarten classroom enjoyed hosting 17 grandparents. The children performed four finger plays they have been learning and shared their newly created Big Book entitled "Good Morning Sun." In math class they demonstrated their ability to recognize patterns and originated some of their own. Mr. "H" visited Kindergarten as well and taught the children about his special feature, horrible hair and his sound. The children also demonstrated their newly acquired rhyming skills while participating in the story "Alphabears." The children thoroughly enjoyed sharing their day with their grammies and grampas: Mr. and Mrs. Fowler, Mr. and Mrs. Swasey, Mrs. Elaine Akers, Mrs. Laura Hutchins, Mrs. McLean, Mr. and Mrs. Irish, Mrs. Carol Morton, Mrs. Davis, George, Brother Earl, Sister Earl, Aunt Faye, Colby Roberts, Mrs. Fitzpatrick and Mrs. Brown.

Grandparents' Day was held last week

The 1st-grade students said the following about Grandparents' Day: "The granma's and grampa's ate lunch on Grandparents' Day." "Our grandparents ate lunch with us on Friday." "The grammies and grampies sat next to their kids." "The grammies and grampas had fun." "The grandparents were fun. They came out at recess time." "There were things to eat on Grandparents' Day."

1st-grade grandparent vistors included: Carol Morton, Grace Simmons, Nana and Gramps (Kiers), Grammy Yarnish, Grandma Burgi, Nana Cayer, Grammy Fyrberg, Grammy Morgan, Grandma Lee, Grampa Jim, Grammy Laura, Grandpa Newcomb, Mommy Newcomb, Grammy Hayden, Mom Downs, Grammy (Jonathan's), Mrs. Hall, Grammy Davis, Grammy White, Grammy Sennett, Grammy Norma, Gram Gallant, Gram Gallant, Nana Pauline and Grammy McLean.

The 2nd-graders had a wonderful Grandparents' Day! We had about 12 grandparents visit us that day. We even had a grandmother call her grandchild (Dusty Davis) from Utah that morning-what a surprise and what a thoughtful grandmother! We also had a grandparent come all the way from Carmel (near Bangor) that day.

Christy Richardson's grandmother brought in three ceramic dolls she had made-they were beautiful. Adam Williamson's grandfather had taken time off from driving a school bus to visit with us-that's a thoughtful grampa! Samantha Mayberry's grandparents joined her for lunch-she was thrilled to have them come. Casey Brown was very glad to see her grandparents visiting that day.

Alcohol Mary residents say proposed driveway sites are too dangerous

Residents of Alcohol Mary Road used last week's public hearing on the proposed Rolling Hills Subdivision to try to convince the Greenwood Planning Board that opening more driveways onto their steep, twisting, mostly dirt road was not a good idea, especially at the locations proposed by the developers. The residents didn't beat around the bush, "It's an absurdly, ridiculously unsafe situation." Nancy Dewing said of one of the proposed locations. "It's absolutely irresponsible to allow a driveway to go there At issue are two driveways, serving four of the eight lots in the 60-acre subdivision, which is located at the corner of Alcohol Mary and Richardson Hollow

The remaining four lots all enter onto Richardson Hollow Road, and the residents of Alcohol Mary Road have suggested to the board that the developer, Ellis Reality Trust, of Framingham, Mass., be required to build a collecting road laid out in such a way as to allow all eight lots to access Richardson

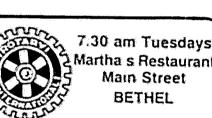

Hollow Road. Alcohol Mary Road is already unsafe, its residents contend, especially in the winter when the hill becomes icy and snowbanks block a driver's vision of what lies ahead. Accidents on the road are common. residents say, regardless of how cautiously they drive.

In the winter it is often impossible to get up the nearly mile-long series of hills. they say, and two people at the hearing told of having slid backwards down one particularly bad stretch.

Residents centend that, especially in the winter, if anyone tried to enter the road from one of the two driveways while another car was accelerating to make the hill or trying to keep control while coming down, a very serious accident could

In describing "the physical reality" of the two driveway sites, Mrs. Dewing noted that the upper one crosses a deep dip before reaching the road. In the unit project in the Sunday River Valley. The board assigns one of its members to pre-screen each application before the entire board starts its deliberations. Board Member Burton Mills presented a list of techinical deficiencies on the application, which were discussed with Dana Douglass, the representative of Glover Development

The application will not be discussed further until the deficiencies are corrected.

The next meeting of the Newry Planning Board will be held on Oct. 5 at 7 p.m. at the Newry Municipal Building. Updating the comprehensive plan is the main item on the agenda. The first meeting of the Newry Zoning Committee has been set for 7 p.m., Oct. 12, at the Municipal Building. This will be an organization meeting chaired by Jim Sysko. Other members appointed to this committee by the Newry selectmen were Brooks Morton, Suzanne Hayner, Burt Mills. Sylvia Gray, Roger Wheeler and Nancy Babcock. Public participation throughout the zoning process is very important.

winter a driver would be forced to accelerate to get up the driveway, she said, and would have little time or room for maneuver if they encountered anyone passing by on the road.

The lower driveway entrance was even more dangerous, she said, because it would be located on a curve at the base of the steepest stretch of the road.

George Courbron, a representative of the developer, said that he felt both sites were safe, and he noted that in response to the residents' concerns the developer had already reduced the number of driveways from the original plan and had agreed to clear and level at both sites in order to improve visibility.

He also noted that the lots were intended for sale to seasonal occupants, who would be unlikely to use them much during the winter.

The residents countered that there was no guarantee who would buy the lots or ben they would use them.

The residents contend that even with the changes to the original plan the road will still be made more unsafe. They argue that Greenwood's subdivision ordinance requires the planning board to consider safety when reviewing a subdivision application.

The fact that it would cost the developer more money to access all the lots from Richardson Hollow Road should not be a factor in the board's decision, they argue Planning board members said little at last week's hearing. They are expected to vote on the application at the board's next regular meeting, scheduled for Oct.

The thrill-seekers have landed, and canocists, sailors and responsible motorboat operators are shaking in their life preservers.
